HMCS HAIDA:

- Is the last survivor of the twenty-seven Tribal Class destroyers, thirteen of which, including HMCS ATHABASKAN, were lost during the Second World War;
- sank more surface tonnage than any other Canadian ship during that conflict and consequently is known as Canada's "fightingest" ship;
- is one of only three remaining of the over four hundred Canadian warships from the Second World War, a time when Canada's navy was the third largest in the world;
- is the only survivor of the eight Canadian warships that served during the Korean War from 1950 to 1953; and
- along with HMCS SACKVILLE, is one of two former Canadian warships designated as Naval Memorials and worthy of passing honours from ships of the current fleet.
